Subject: Types of Writing in My Field

- Every memo begins with a Memo heading + To, From, Date, and Subject lines.
- The material to the right of the lines must align within itself. (See vertical line.)
- Double space (leave 1 blank line) between paragraphs.
- Do not indent paragraphs.
- Use hierarchical headings, in bold. Your title should be the largest, then work down from there. (The ones here are 18, 16, & 14).
- I tend to place headings right on top of text, but you don't have to. If you don't do this, leave 1 blank line between the heading and the text.

Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consectetur adipiscing elit. Morbi euismod vel arcu. Quisque neque diam, consequat vitae enim vel, dignissim non erat eu aliquet. Aliquam fringilla nibh risus, eget molestie tortor vehicula et massa nec bibendum. Donec commodo ut est sed pretium. Etiam non tristique justo.

This is the intro paragraph. There is no need to give an introduction a heading, as it's obvious it's the intro.

Approach

First-level Headings (main sections; same size, style)

Nullam eleifend lorem enim, in eleifend neque suscipit sed. Maecenas sollicitudin purus id orci posuere, ac tempus leo venenatis. Nulla bibendum odio mi, non luctus ante convallis et. Donec eleifend nisi vel sapien tincidunt ultricies. Vivamus congue nunc rutrum orci malesuada ornare. Aenean venenatis vitae lectus. Fusce non facilisis turpis.

When you have a section that includes subsections, make sure you include a sentence between the main heading & first subheading that introduces what's coming up.

Types of Writing

From my research, I discovered that those who work in my field generally spend their time writing [identify 1], [identify 2], [identify 3], and [identify 4].

Writing Type 1

Vivamus aliquam egestas. Quisque laoreet placerat risus. Cras tempus, orci eu gravida interdum, libero odio vestibulum orci, id tincidunt quam sem a elit. Donec rhoncus urna nec neque interdum laoreet.

"Writing Type 1" & other similar headings are placeholders for you. Replace them with the TYPE OF WRITING (e.g., trip report, text messages, emails).

Writing Type 2

Second-level Headings (subsections; same size, style)

Sed scelerisque blandit justo eget dictum.
